Final Project Idea

By: Grant Katanick

- My audience is the soccer fanbase as a whole since a single collective website like this does not exist.

- The problem I am addressing is building a well-balanced soccer community website that combines elements like comments sections under articles, live comments on games, live breaking news, cool live data analytics, customizable feed, and videos into one app. I feel this will bring the soccer community together since everyone can react to each game in one place.

- This is unique since no other website incorporates all of this in a simple way for the soccer community. Many apps have these aforementioned features but none combine them in the way my app will, especially when it comes to soccer.

- I will be making a website that has articles along with videos about soccer. The website will be fully customizable for your favorite team and be able to give you the most important proven real news (via RSS hopefully). There will also be a comment section on each article and game page. Most of this should be able to be done or else I will build some of it up with an online editor.
